Workshop on Subjective Expectations

Copenhagen, 10–11 June 2027

Subjective expectations play a fundamental role in macro and microeconomic models, and the literature using them has grown rapidly over the last two decades. We invite scholars whose research contributes to this flourishing literature to submit their manuscripts to the Subjective Expectations Workshop, to be held in Copenhagen, Denmark.

The goal of the workshop is to bring together junior and senior researchers using subjective expectations in their work and to foster and stimulate the exchange of ideas.

The workshop is the ninth in a series of workshops on Subjective Expectations. Previous workshops have been held at Université Laval in Québec City (2009 and 2011), the University of Essex (2014), the New York Federal Reserve Bank (2016), CESifo in Munich (2018), virtually (2020), Bocconi University (2023) and Nova School of Business and Economics in Lisbon (2025).

The workshop will be preceded by a PhD minicourse on subjective expectations, to be held on 9 June 2027, also in Copenhagen.

Keynote Speakers

Charles F. Manski (Northwestern University)

Christopher Roth (LMU Munich)
